Methods in Social Science Research- Recent Advances (May 20 – June 09, 2014)

Science attains maturity and perfection through scientific methods. So growth of every science has been accompanied by the development of research technique in the field. Social science research has made remarkable contribution towards societal development. Its importance cannot be denied in the development of Indian Agriculture and Rural Development as well. In future, these challenges are going to assume new dimensions in the wake of advancement in information technology, economic liberalization and globalization of Indian society in general and the rural society in particular.

Future progress and prosperity of the Indian agriculture and society on a sustainable basis will depend on the quality and originality of social research which will give proper inputs and directions to agriculture and rural development on long term basis. All this necessitates to develop need based goal oriented and value free research potentials amongst the social scientists with a mission mode approach. Social scientists have to become more sensitive to these changes and learn to develop, utilize and systematize their research faculty by knowing the developments in the areas of social research world over for suggesting most appropriate solutions to socio-economic and cultural problems which are being faced by the Indian society in the present scenario.

The Refresher Course on õMethods in Social Science Research- Recent Advances+ has been formulated in such a way that it will empower the researchers to understand problems in proper perspective and the application of latest scientific techniques and methods in finding solution to socio-economic and cultural problems.
